To Clean your Hair Without Wetting

> You cannot wash your hair every time it gets dirty or greasy. You may not have the time, or be suffering from colds or illness. So between the wet shampoos you should use Icilma Hair Powder, the novel dry shampoo—every two or three days, if you wish to improve your hair and preserve its own natural beauty.

Just sprinkle a little over the hair, leave for a minute or so, and then brush out-that's all. The powder, dust and grease come away in the brushing and the hair is left clean, fresh and glossy. No trouble. No risk of any sort,

(The only dry shampoo that readily brushes out). 2d. pachet; 7 pachets 1/-; large box 1/6; everywhere as usual.

Icilma is pronounced Eye-silma.

Portugal and Germany.

Whether the communication which Germany has addressed to Portugal is properly to be described as an ultimatum is not yet certain; but the Frankfurter Zeitung, a sufficient authority; vouches for the despatch of a Note couched in sharp terms. This protests vigorously against the recent requisition by the Portuguese Government of German ships lying in Portuguese harbours, and "expresses the expectation that Portugal will cancel the seizure." It is an expectation which will certainly not Portugal will cancel the seizure. It is an expectation which will certainly not be realised. The statements made in the Chamber by the Premier, Dr. Affonso Costa, show that Portugal did not take If, as it is natural to assume, there is to be a second stage of the great German offensive in the west, there is no sign as yet of its beginning. During the past week the fighting in the neighbourhood of Verdun has been of an intense character, because the second of the second of Verdun has been of an intense character, but since last Friday there has been no shifting if positions of which account need be takeff. The first main German attack has ceased to yield results in the way of captures of ground, and such apprehension as may have been felt by a public which was unaware of the measure of the French capacity for resistance to the days that have followed the attainment of the high-water mark of the enemy's advance the strained anxiety of the Allied peoples has gradually changed to a sober optimism. The loss of a considerable extent of ground on an important sector does not, on the face of it, suggest cheer-of a fatal collapse. It seemed to belie the expressions of confidence in the issue of the fight which were uttered in official circles. The public knows now what it could not be told then—that the reserves of the defence were ready to be launched at the right moment, and that the responsible commanders had the situation well in hand. The enemy has gained sponsible commanders had the spansed operation were considered; the idea of the reward of his initiative on the reward of his initiative on the western front, and of the advantage was openly canvassed. There supervened. organism of concealing until the last however, a period of prolonged internal disorder, which made active assistance to moment the precise direction of his main disorder, which made active assistance to the scheme of alteration and extension of the Allies impracticable. Though Porthe General Post Office, which had for one of we are at leave to question whether he has gained all that he might fairly have anticipated as the reward of that advantage. He must include in the cost of his gain in the Verdun sector the losses intage. He must include in the cost of his gain in the Verdun sector the losses in curred in the series of feints made at other parts of the line for the purpose of hiding his real purpose. This question suggests the second ground of optimism. We now seems, the second ground of optimism. We now step may be doubted; but it is not report forth by the enemy with the object of achieving, as we may fairly assume, a devisive and far-reaching success in this battle. In the light of this knowledge we are entitled to reassure ourselves as to the general safety of the Allied line in the west.

We know, for example, the extraordinary concentration of resources in guns and infantry which was brought to bear by the enemy on a narrow front. The effort had been in preparation for some months, During Tantry which was brought to bear by the enemy on a narrow front. The effort had been in preparation for some months, During Tantry which was brought to bear by the enemy or a narrow front. The effort had been in preparation for some months, During Tantry which was brought up the greater part of the heavy artillery from Serbia, together with some of the large and interest companies and assurance that they may adopt the same advantageous course with impunity.

FAILURE OF GERMAN HOPES.

NEEDLESS WASTAGE OF

HUMAN LIFE. (PRESS ASSOCIATION WAR SPECIAL.) The following despatch has been received from Mr. H. Warner Allen, the representa-tive of the British Press with the French

In Artois, to the east of the road from Neuville to La Folic, we blew up a mine under an old crater w...ich the enemy was occupying.

We took possession of the new crater. In the region of Verdun the enemy violently bombarded, in the course of the night, Mort Homme (the Dead Man) and the Cote de l'Oie, and between Malancourt and Ferges, as well as the principal passages of the Meuse.

There was little artillery activity to the east of the Meuse.

In the Woevre, after an intense artillery preparation, the enemy vesterday at the end forest of Champaneux, below the plateau of Arenco, believed that the capital of Lorraine was in their hands, only to find that the real defence was just beginning—so at Verdun it was only on the line between the Cote du Poivre and Douaumont that the enemy discovered the strength of the French resistance. A counter-offensive was opened by the French. The village of Douaumont was recaptured and the French swept round the fort. A line of resistance stronger than any of the defences further north was drawn across the north of Verdun.

The result of this unexpected resistance soon became apparent. The German attacks, instead of being concentrated on the narrow passage through which they were trying to force their way, became of a more local character, and a series of diversions began. The surprise attack in Champagne occupied the most prominent part of Monday's German communiqué, and Verdun seems to have been allowed to sink to comparatively secondary importance. Then various attacks were announced in the Woevre, particularly in the neighbourhood of the railway station at Eix. Those engagements, owing to the lie of the country, cannot give a decisive result.

The one essential of the German attack on Verdun is success on the line between the Cote du Poivre and Douaumont. Any advance that they may make in the marshy plain west of Etain can scarcely endanger the safety of the fortress.

FROM "THE TIMES" OF WESTERN FIELD FIRST BATTLE OF THE WAR AND TRADE ROLL OF HONOUR SPECIAL EXTRA. SUBMARINE WAR

of Verdum with the Daily Mail's own correspondent in Paris yesterday, said—The standstill to which the enemy has been brought on the Hauts de Meuse, the only point which they hold with success, means that the offensive must be begun all over again. I have been present at most of the great battles since the beginning of the war, and they have all followed one general plan. First, during the period of preparation comes a series of divisions at various points. Then the general advance occurs along a considerable front, which narrows as the action develops. Later the fighting is concentrated on two or three main points. Finally the attack centres on one key position, round which it rages for two or three days—for instance, the assault on Douanmont during Friday and Saturday and part of Sunday—and when the duel on that point ceases it may be assumed that the battle is over. That is the situation at the present moment round Verdun.

DEEDS OF HEROISM.

Among the episodes of Verdun, recounted by men wounded in the battle, is one record ing the conspicuous galiantry of a French Infantry Commandant named de Font Reaux, says the Paris correspondent of the Daily (Mail. On Saturday last, one of the most critical days of the struggle round Douaumont, the men of one regiment, dazed by five hours' incessant shelling, weakened in the centre. Their line was not broken, but they threatened to yield. The men in some places fell back a couple of hundred paces and threw themselves on the ground. De Font Reaux, realising the danger, seized a trifle and deliberately walked forward under a hail of shrapnel, and standing alone on the crest where the fire was hottest, shouted—"On your feet, lads, and form fours." The men immediately obeyed. When they had formed up into an open column, the commandant, shouldering his rifle, shouted "Forward," and led them back to the firing line. Another officer who distinguished himself on the same day was a Colonel commanding a regiment of light infantry. Noticing that two machine guns engaged in an enfladding fre had stopped work, he went forward with an orderly to see what was the matter. He found the gunners shot dead. Kneeling down, he told his companion to pass him a belt of cartridges, and kept the gun going at top speed. When the first gun became heated, he turned to the other, and kept up the enflading fire all through the afternoon.

The Daily Telegraph's own corresponden at Copenhagen telegraphed last night that, according to a military writer in the Svenska Dagblad, it is Field Marshal von Mackenson who planned the frontal attack on Verdun, and in reality is in chief command there.

A POLITICAL SCANDAL.

The expenditure upon payment of members to be debated in the House of Common is the members are to be the judges of thei own cause, we are certain to have a frugal and righteons decision, thinks the Morning Post. For our part, we cannot conceive upon what principle of the Constitution members of Parliament should receive payments from the Treasury. They sit in Parliament as representatives not of the State, but of their constituencies, and their duty is to watch and check the administration by which they are now paid in fact, they take money from the body they are supposed to criticise and control. There is an excellent case for the payment of needy members by constituencies which desire to be represented by them, but it is against all the orinciples of our Constitution and of commonsense that members elected to watch the interests of the country should be paid by the State. This scandal, which is less an extra vagance than a corruption, ought to be reformed. own cause, we are certain to have a frugal and

B. RULES TO BE OBSERVED IN EXERCISE OF RIGHT OF SELP-DEPENCE.

1. The master or officer in command is responsible for the opening and ceasing fire.

2. Participation in armed resistance must be confined to persons acting under orders of the master or officer in command.

3. Before opening fire the British colours must be hoisted.

4. Fire must not be opened or continued. must be hoisted.

4. Fire must not be opened or continued from a vessel which has stopped, hauled down her flag, or otherwise indicated her intention to surrender.

5. The expression armament in these intructions includes not only cannon, but also rides and machine guns must conform to Article 25 of The Hague Convention, 1907.
That is to say—the bullets must be cased in nickel or other hard substance, and must not be split or cut in such a way as to cause them to expand or set up, on striking a man. The use of explosive bullets is forbidden.

CIRCUMSTANCES UNDER WHICH ARMAMENT SHOULD BE EMPLOYED. 1. The armament is supplied for the purse of defence only, and the object of the ster should be to avoid action whenever ossible.

2. Experience has shown that hostile subarines and aircraft have frequently attacked irrchant vessels without warning. It is imout ant, therefore, that craft of this descripion should not be allowed to approach to a nort range, at which a torpedo or bomb aunched without notice would almost cerainly take effect. British and Allied submarines and aircraft have orders not to aporoach merchant vessels. Consequently it any be presumed that any submarine or airaft, which deliberately approaches or purues a merchant vessel does so with hostile mention. In such cases, fire may be opened a self-defence, in order to prevent the hostile
raft closing to a range at which resistance

3.4 An armed merchant vessel proceeding to ender assistance to the crew of a vessel in istress must not seek action with any hostile raft though if she is herself attacked while o doing fire may be opened in self-defence.

4. It should be remembered that the flag doing fire may be opened in self-defence.

4. It should be remembered that the flag is no guide to nationality. German subnarines and armed merchant vessels have frequently employed British, Allied, or neutral rolours in order to approach undetected. Though, however, the use of disguise and alse colours, in order to escape capture, is a egitimate ruse de guerre, its adoption by densively-armed merchant ships may easily lead to misconception. Such vessels, therefore, are forbidden to adopt any form of disquise which might cause them to be mistaken for neutral ships.

Admiralty War Staff, Trade Division, 20th October, 1915.

These instructions, which are those at present in force, are the latest issued. Successive issues have been made, not by reason of any change of policy—the policy throughout has remained unaltered—but in order by improvement in wording and greater clearness of expression to emphasise the purely defensive character of the armament of merchant vessels. It is because of the distorted interpretation given to these instructions as a whole, and of the very forced character of the interpretation given by the German Government to the portions which they quote from the earlier issue of the instructions, that the Admiralty have felt it desirable, with a view to allaying neutral anxiety, to publish these instructions in extense.

PROPOSED STRONG MEASURES. Something was being done in regard to the matter now. The issue of badges, which was done at one time in the most indiacriminate manner, was now being carefully organised under the direction of the Minister of Munitions. In every case the badge was being verified, and if they were legitimately obtained they were now accompanied by a certificate, and various departments were revising their list of badges, and not before it was wanted, with a view to reducing them. The only thing they ought to have in view, if they could reduce the number, was to release men of serviceable age, and preferably single. The Board of Trade had lately made a proposal to reduce the large number of reserved occupations by teking out certain individual classes. This was a step in the right drection, and he appealed to Lord Selborne to do the same in his Department. But such a step was not nearly enough, and the Government must be prepared to take far stronger measures if they were going to get anything like the number of men it was anticipated we should get, and which it was necessary we should get, and which it was necessary we abould get, and would probably want some modification, but at the same time he sincerely hoped the Government would accept them as the basis of an arrangement for dealing with starred men, badges, and reserved occupations. These were his two proposals. On single man who had not attained the age of 51 was to be allowed to claim exemption on the ground that he was starred; badged, or in a reserved had not attained the age of 31 was to be allowed to claim exemption on the ground that he was starred; badged, or in a reserved occupation; secondly, all other single men and all married men should not be considered as hemg starred or in reserved occupations unless they had held their present post, or one of a similar character with another firm, previous to lat August. If that was done we should get the men we required. These men would have the same right of appeal on various grounds, but not on the ground that they were starred, badged, or reserved. This, of course, could not apply to skilled workers in munition works at the present moment, undoubtedly, absorbed more of these men we wanted to get than any other department, and there was no doubt this was giving

He referred to Sir John Simon, and he could not resist just saying how deeply he regretted that his great influence should be used, as 't undoubtedly was being used—perhaps not as he meant it should be used, but as it was being used—as an infentive to people in the country to do what they could to defeat the Military Service Act. There was one conscientious objector who must appeal to one's sense of humour, and he was so like Sir John Simon that he would quote him. A home service Territorial appealed to the tribunal to escape general service, dd, when asked the reason, he said it was because he had a conscientious objection to killing sman. "But," asked the astonished tribunal "supposing you were defending the coasts us

Viscount MIDLETON asked the Earl of Derby whether he was in a position to make, any statement regarding the number of exemptions given by local tribunals to attested single men. He mentioned that in the case of one tribunal in Scotland, out of 85 applicants for exemption, 70 had been granted, and out of another batch of 75 applicants 65 had been granted. The exemptions were all agricultural But if this sort of thing went on, the Military Service Act would become of ne effect.

The Earl of SELBORNE said, while he greed that there was a great need for financial and agricultural stability, they could not win the war without a sufficient Army if we could not win the war sufficient Army if we could not win the case of one tribunal in Scotland, out of 85 applicants 65 had been granted. The nonothing in the place were fed. which were really entitled to exemption. Men whose occupations appeared in these reserved lists should not assume that they were regarded as indispensable. He had every reason to believe that the local and central tribunals were doing their work well and successfully. Employers should realise that they would in all probability lose their men, and should arrange to get women to take their places. There were 1,600,000 women who were reported as experienced in industry of some kind and who were not yet employed. I brd DERBY said that they should not flatter themselves that it would be only the earlier groups that would be disappointing, neither should they imagine that the proposals for the reduction of cases of men in reserve occupations would be likely so to increase the number of those available that we should obtain all the men we wanted. The should obtain all the men we wanted. The matter would have to be done on a bigger scale than at present, and he hoped the Government would decide that it must be done on that bigger scale.

Subsequently the Royal assent was given by Commission to the Consolidated Fund (No. 1) Bill and the Naval Prize (Procedure) Bill, the Lords Commissioners being the Lord starred, badged, or reserved. This, of course, could not apply to skilled workers in munition works at the present moment, undoubtedly, absorbed more of these ment, undoubtedly, absorbed more of these ment, and there was no doubt this was giving rise to a certain amount of friction. He recognised that this question must stand on a different footing from anything else. Munitions we must have, but he knew from his own knowledge that Mr. Lloyd George was helping all he could to get men to serve with the Colours, and to replace workers by women and the medically unfit. He implored the Government to take a very strong line with regard to this exemption question. They must have recognised by this time that when they did take a strong line they had got practically the whole country at their back.

NATURALISED SUBJECTS AND INTERNMENT.

INTERNMENT.

Mr. WILFRED ASHLEY moved to reduce the vote by £100, in order to call attention to the administration of the Defence of the Realm Act in regard to the internment of naturalised British subjects: He said that the Act, which was passed while Sir John Simon was in effice, gave the Home Secretary power to intern any person of hostile origin or association until the end of the war. The Home Secretary was the absolute judge as to who was to be interned. He possessed the powers of the bastille, lettres de cachet, and the stan chamber. the star chamber.

MR. HERBERT SAMUEL.

MR. HERBERT SAMUEL.

Mr. HERBERT SAMUEL (Home Secretary) said that the House ought to know sactly the procedure which was followed. At the outbreak of the war there were large numbers of Germans in this country, and power was given to the Executive to internation for the security and the safety of the State, not because they had committed any offence or were liable to any charge, but for the sake of security and the prevention of possible danger. A considerable number of Germans were so interned, but when the country had more experience of Germans were so interned, but when the country had more experience of Germans were so interned, but when the country had more experience of Germans were so interned, but when the country had more experience of Germans who had retained their German acquired British nationality without in many cases surrendering their German allegiance. They had changed their nationality, but not their that with the safety of the State, they had to be regarded as Germans, and the Executive was armed with power to deal with them. Then there was a small number of persons who, although born in this country, were born of German parents, and brought up in German surroundings. It was felt that it would be impossible to draw a clear line between them and British subjects born in Germany, but naturalised here, and it was felt by the House that the Executive ought to be given power to intern them.

SIR JOHN SIMON.

Sir JOHN SIMON said he was not sure whether this question had been raised as a matter of policy or a matter of law. These particular regulations had already been discussed with great care by the judges. The High Court and the Court of Appeal had both expressed the opinion that the regulations were perfectly legal. The matter would be further considered by the House of Lords. Therefore, it would be wrong for the Committee to discuss the legality of the regulations. With regard to the question of policy, the hon. gentleman who moved the amendment thought that in time of war it was quite proper that citizens should be called upon to forego some of the privileges they enjoyed in time of peace. If it were admitted that an enemy subject should be interned in time of war, it seemed to him absurd to say that no control should be exercised over a German, who, although a naturalised British subject, dwas perfectly well known by the authorities to be an agent of the enemy, or over a member of a German family who had recently passed through the United States, and become naturalised there.

Mr. WATSON RUTHERFORD thought it had been made clear that no injustics was being done.

Mr. WATSON RUTHERFORD thought it had been made clear that no injustics was being done.

Mr. ASHLEY withdrew his amendment. The resolution was agreed to.

Progress was reported, and the House advention of their future employment for further consideration.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

The New Freie Presse (February 21st) gives prominence to the announcement that the King of Bulgaria has been reconciled to the Pope. The paper then gives an account of the breath with the Pope. The Bulgarian and his descendants should hold none other than the Orthodox faith. Only an elected Prince has the right to hold any other faith. The the accession of King Ferdinand this article was altered, giving the elected Prince and his heir the right to continue another faith. In 1895 a deputation waited on the King with a request that the Crom Prince, who had been baptised in the Catholic faith, should adopt the Orthodox faith. King Ferdinand promised to fulfil the wishes of Parliament. The result of this was a breach with the Vatican and with his first wife which has existed up till now. The King of Bulgaria has remained a Catholic, and his reconciliation with the Catholic Church took place a year ago. The reconciliation with the Vatican.

ADMESTIC QUESTION.

To THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.
Sin,—I have three grown-up daughters, there es evrants, and a house the rent of which I am put to the pin of my collar to pay. My eldest daughter works at a munition factory. She has to be there at 6 a.m., and the servants have to get up in time to call her and to get her tea. The work she does all day is of a simple, manual kind, the equivalent of cleaning stair-rods. The other two girls attend later at the same place to prepare and serve meals for those engaged in the factory. Now, if we were to discharge the time servants, and a house the rent of which I am put to the pin of my collar to pay.

NATIONAL UNIVERSITY STUDENTS AND THE WAR.

AND THE WAR.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

Sig.—Your correspondent "Observer" is not correct in stating that the students of the National University will not lift a little DISTRESS OF THE HAMBURG TRADERS.

The Frankfurtet Zeitung (February 18th) reports from Hamburg that the Liberals in the Hamburg Lower Chamber (Hamburger Bürgerschaft) had protested strongly against the methods of the Imperial War Trade Committee in sequestrating or expropriating goods in Hamburg. Great damage had been done by excluding the trade and expropriating goods in Hamburg. Great damage had been done by excluding the trade and expropriating goods in Hamburg. Great damage had been done by excluding the trade and expropriating goods in Hamburg. Great damage had been done by excluding the trade and expropriating goods in Hamburg. Great damage had been done by excluding the trade on the owners All the war organisations had been located in Berlin, for which there was no seed. Nor had the Chambers of Commerce been energetic enough to protect the interests of trade. Just fears were expressed that the war organisations might continue their arbitrary and nefarious action after the war. Bürgermeister Predöhl and some members of the Right, without entering into the alleged facts of injury and injustice done, pointed to the difficulties that had to be overcome and appealed to the patriotism of the Hamburg merchants. the National University will not lift a little finger to assist the Government. Is he aware that, more than twelve months ago, every effort was made by the students to form an Officers' Training Corps similar to that of Trinity College? About one hundred enrolled, attended drilis regularly under the control of some of the professors, and everything apparently was progressing aright for the formation of a body of men available for military exigencies—in fact, so far that the men were actually measured for their uniforms. For some reason, best known to the War Office, sanction for formation of the corps was withheld, and I understand that later correspondence on the subject was not answered. Naturally, the students resent this treatment.—Yours, etc., March 2nd, 1916.

GERMAN PRESS CENSORSHIP.

The Zeitungs-Verlag of 11th February gives an account of the troubles of the German Press under the censorship. The restrictive measures, which were intended for a war of short duration, became increasingly irksome as time went on. There is a great deal of uncertainty as to what may or may not be published; for instance, nobody knows whether true reports of Parliamentary speeches are or are not allowed to be published in the Press. The publication of weather reports had been placed under restriction, which had as reiously affected many newspapers; the publication of casualty lists had also been interfered with, and the publication of casualty lists had also been interfered with, and the publication of unofficial stock Exchange and Money market quotations had been prohibited. The Press had borne all this without murmur, but they protested against the excessive interference of the consorship in other matters, and they found the support of the Budget Committee of both the Reichstag and the Prussian Diet in asking that the excessive interference of the consorship in the following that the content of the General Staff, which was at first charged with these masters, could not adequately perform the task, because it had only an advisory vote vis-d-vis the censorship in the true of the General Staff, which was at first charged with these masters, could not adequately perform the task, because it had only an advisory vote vis-d-vis the censor-slip authorities of the several General Staff, which was at first charged with these masters, could not adequately perform the task, because it had only an advisory vote vis-d-vis the censor-slip authorities of the several General Staff, which was at first charged with these masters, could not adequately perform the task, because it had only an advisory vote vis-d-vis the censor-slip authorities of the several General Staff, which are consorted to the country. SHORTAGE OF PAPER. TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES. I was recently asked by a friend to enquire what payment would be given for a large quantity of old paper. I enquired at numerous rag merchants', etc., in the city, but so far my search has proved "weary, stale, and unprofitable." The marine-store dealers smile fous rag merchants', etc., in the city, but so far my search has proved "weary, stale, and unprofitable." The marine-store dealers smile at the idea of buying such paper, and I have just met an enterprising lady who collected over a ton of waste paper—for a charitable object—under the belief that it would be readily saleable. Finding it impossible to obtain a purchaser, this lady has allowed a paper merchant to cart the lot away free.

In theatrical phraseology, to fill a house with non-paying spectators is to "paper a house." In spite of the agitation about shortage of paper-pulp, it would also appear to be a non-paying enterprise for the thrifty soul to fill the house with paper. Better burn it and keep the home sanitary.—Yours, etc.,

Dublin, March 2nd, 1916. TELEPHONE OPERATORS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

Sir.—It has now become usual to employ women for many kinds of work hitherto done by men, and I think it should be suggested to the Postmaster-General that it would be well to substitute women for men for night duty in the Telephone Exchange.

The National Telephone Company employed women for this work, but, when the Post Office took over the telephone system, they put men on this work for some reasons best known to themselves, though certainly not for the benefit of the telephone service. This is essentially women's work; they do it well and men do it badly. Most subscribers who have occasion to use the telephone after 8 p.m. will agree with me that the service is much more unsatisfactory since men have been put on the job.—Yours, etc.,

Co. Dublin, March 2nd, 1916.

Last evening the Harrison Frewin Opera Company performed "The Jewess" (Halevy). It was rather surprising that the opera did not attract a larger audience, for the music is dignified and striking, while the dramatic side of the work is also powerful. The opera was well "put on" from a spectacular point of view, and it was performed with a good deal of spirit, for which there is ample scope. Occasionally, indeed, finish was sacrificed to energetic interpretation, but Miss Raymonde Any, who sustained the character of Rachel, could not be charged with that limitation. Her task was a heavy one, and she carried it through with credit. In the thrilling scene in which Rachel denounces the Prince in the palace scene she was at her best, and her voice rang out clearly. The concerted items are always a feature of this opera, and the spirit with which they were given made them thoroughly effective. To Mr. William Boland was entrusted the part of Eleazar, with good results, and Mr. John Clarke sustained that of Prince Leopold with his usual ability. North-Easterns at 1001 were a down. Among Passenger descriptions, Brighton Def. weakened 4 to 554, but Chathams at 7½ were 4 to the good. Districts weakened 4 to 142, and Underground Electric Sixes at 812 were lower by the same fraction. There was a little support for Scotch Stocks from the North, but it was not sufficient to influence quotations.

There was an absence of animation about the Mining market, which was not at all interesting, all day. South African support was negligible. Rhodesians and Diamond Shares were dull and hesitating in sympathy. Interest largely centred in base metal shares in consequence of the suspension of dealings in all these metals except tin, as the result of the Government's prohibition of speculative operations. Presumably the stoppage of business in these metals will only be temporary, and some metals will only be temporary, and some modus evendi will be discovered as the outcome of the deputation to the Minister of Munitions on the subject. The price of tin was rather nominal and 50s, per ton down.

Among Kaffirs, Rand Mines fell 6d. to 75s., but Randfonteins were rather better. Other Finance Shares were staady to dull. Modder fonteins, among Gold Shares, weakened 1/2 to 15j, but Meyer and Charltons rallied ½ to 5/x. Glencairns fell 1s., and Robinsons at 20s. 9d. were 9d. down. There were mixed changes averaging 6d. elsewhere. Chartereds eased 3d. to 10s. 6d., but Tanks hardened slightly to 38s. 9d. Other Rhodesians showed little thange.
